

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A voice call originating method in a radio terminal, by which a voice call origination can be immediately made to a telephone number included in a message during identifying the message on the radio terminal, comprises: a step of receiving the message; a step of identifying the telephone number included in the message; and a step of designating the identified telephone number and performing a voice call origination, whereby the voice call can be made by designating directly the telephone number included in the message without taking an additional note.